They act promptly and never gripe. They are so dainty that it is a pleasure to take them. One to two act as a mild laxative; two or four act as a pleasant and effective cathartic. They are purely vegetable and absolutely harmless. They tonic the liver.

It is amusing to see the deep interest which some people profess for the taxpayers on general principles, but at the same time uphold the fleecing of them in particular cases. HE CLAWED THE TIGER.

But When it Came to Bucking a Municipal Game a Sporty Miner Finds the System a Losing One and Repents in the Calaboose.

W. B. Rising, a miner who landed in town a few days ago with a capital stock of eighty cents, and later bucked the tiger out of his lair to the tune of eight hundred dollars, has had a meteoric experience in hitting the high and low cards financially and morally. Yesterday his luck turned against him, and he went into the air, but in the meantime he remembered a sister in Texas by telegraphing her a sum of money aggregating over $300 of his winnings. Unfortunately for the lady she was out of that Texas city, and the money was held accordingly. Later his luck went against him, and he made a bee line for the Postal office to have that sum telegraphed back to Prescott, and he had not a cent to pay for the wire. Then he demanded of the telegraph company a threat to make them comply, and he backed up his intellectual lay out with total annihilation, and used some very obscene language while ladies were present in the lobby of the Burke. Chief Prince took a hand in the game and ran him into the square box of the city, where he shuffled off the night in a single out system that the city had stacked for him. Yesterday morning he asked for the city dealer, and Judge McLane dealt from the municipal pack of cards and took a bet of $25 that he would not again run a blazer on the peaceful system that prevails, which sum Rising paid. He was very indignant but suppressed his language and went again at the green cloth game of chance. Thus will our fair city lose another friend and patron.
